

Mr Panagiotis Stathakis is a leading consultant liver and pancreatic surgeon based in Manchester, specialising in liver and pancreas surgery alongside gallbladder surgery, inguinal hernia and laparoscopy.

He works at Manchester Royal Infirmary (MRI), Manchester University, NHS Foundation Trust and privately practices at The Highfield Hospital, Manchester. Mr Stathakis is highly qualified and underwent training at both nationally and internationally recognised medical institutions. He completed general surgical training in Greece and then joined MRI Hospital liver and pancreas unit as a senior clinical fellow where he trained in advanced HPB (hepato-pancreato-biliary) surgery. After his clinical training, Mr Stathakis was appointed consultant HPB surgeon at Manchester University FT. Mr Stathakis is at the forefront of his field focusing on providing the best care to his patients using the latest minimally invasive techniques as well as contributing to numerous research work.